NOTES TO THE CONDUCTOR

This arrangement of Greensleeves utilizes two different jazz waltz rhythms. In the first type of rhythm, the off beats of beats 1 and 2 of the first measure of the two-bar pattern (mm. 1–2, for example) are very important and must be swung. Your pianist should take care to not play with too much force the right hand pattern (doubled by guitar); the overall rhythmic feel should be fairly easy-going and unobtrusive. The second jazz waltz rhythm, which begins at m. 45, is more straightforward and simply involves walking bass and use of the drum set in a swing style. Here, your drummer should experiment with different ride rhythms to break up the ongoing three-quarter-notes-to-a-measure melodic content.

Throughout the chart, the horns impart a smooth and relaxed feel, with the exception of a small reoccurring rhythmic tag (such as saxes at mm. 23–26, and mm. 41–44, etc.—and later with the ensemble at mm. 77–84). There are instances where a counter melody support line may be written above the main melody (saxes at m. 53, for example). Please ensure that the main melody is always louder than the support line.

Lastly, the dynamic level of the main melodic material should never get overly loud. The loudest parts of the chart should occur at areas where rhythm is the main focus, as in the above-mention rhythmic tags and at the very end of the chart.

I hope you enjoy this arrangement of Greensleeves.
